The Power of Partnership

Engagement opportunities to reach leaders in pediatric hematology/oncology
Reach Leaders in Pediatric Hematology/Oncology

The American Society of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology (ASPHO) is a multidisciplinary organization of more than 2,000 members who are dedicated to promoting the optimal care of children, adolescents, and young adults with blood disorders and cancer by advancing research, education, treatment, and professional practice.

ASPHO members treat virtually all children, adolescents, and young adults in this country with cancer, bleeding and clotting disorders, thrombosis, sickle cell disease, and other hematologic abnormalities. Almost 90% of members hold American Board of Pediatrics subspecialty certification in hematology/oncology. More than 85% of physicians in U.S. pediatric hematology/oncology fellowship programs belong to the Society and most attend the ASPHO Conference, the flagship meeting for the subspecialty.

ASPHO provides several ways to reach this important audience, including

- exhibiting and supporting the annual ASPHO Conference
- participating in the Industry Relations Council
- supporting various programs and initiatives throughout the year.

Through your participation you will

- support research collaborations that can lead to optimal treatments for children, adolescents, and young adults with blood disorders and cancer
- connect with senior thought leaders, renowned experts, and dedicated mentors
- promote the advancement of emerging leaders in pediatric hematology/oncology research
- contribute your organization’s expertise to ongoing patient care practices.
Improve the care of children, adolescents, and young adults by supporting those who care for them.
