

Are you considering a career in pediatric hematology/oncology?

American Society of Pediatric Hematology/Oncology

Do you want a career that fosters intellectual curiosity and creativity, meaningful patient relationships, scientific discoveries, and has a vibrant peer community? Gain insights and practical information about pediatric hematology/oncology with ASPHO, the professional home for clinicians and investigators committed to improving the health and futures of children, adolescents, and young adults with cancer and blood disorders.

It's invaluable - and easy - to learn about the science and practice, peer community, and everyday subspecialist experience. Medical students and residents can explore the career path at the ASPHO Conference and as a member of the professional community, and:

- connect with over 2,000 members, from fellows, to junior faculty, to leaders in the field, including fellowship program directors and division directors
- understand career paths, including clinician, clinical educator, and research-based tracks, as well as areas of sub-specialization like informatics, clinical immunology, hemoglobinopathies, and vascular anomalies
- attend education programs and meet the presenters
- benefit from mentoring and early career professional development programs
- receive advocacy, workforce, and DEI updates
- gain insights on leadership skills, critical scientific thinking, and peer interaction
- see how ASPHO's values of collaboration, compassion, diversity and inclusion, health equity, and innovation support patients and the field!

"ASPHO is a great connector and has been crucial to my career, both early on and presently. ASPHO keeps me current and is where I come to get my education. The science is fantastic - I love it."
